Educational Opportunity With a Two-Fold Advantage.

Recognizing the educational advantages to be derived from opportunities to see good art, the schools have arranged with the A. W. Elson Co. of Boston for an art exhibition of 200 pictures to be held in the High School, March 25-28.

This collection, consisting in large part of carbons and photogravures made directly from the original masterpieces, is selected by art experts and should attract large crowds of persons. A small admission will be charged, the entire proceeds of which, after deducting the expense of the exhibit, will be used in the purchase of pictures for wall decoration for our schools. The purpose of the exhibition is clearly two-fold:

First-To give people an opportunity to see a collection of the world's famous masterpieces of painting sculpture and architecture.

Second-To make it possible for the public to own a few of these pictures in schools.

Why should this exhibit interes

Because, throughout the country. people are awakening to the importance and value of good art as creative of a refining influence and inspiring atmosphere-and just so surely as people become familiar with the best in art, just so quickly will the crude in art be displaced through appreciation of something better. It is, of course, idle to suppose that one shall become a competent judge of art simply through studying for a time photographs of prints.

But what can and should be obtained is a large measure of appreciation. work of art which is really great will bear reproduction, and even though this may not possess the away, that measure of power which it does possess is well worth taking. At the early age of six he began to take violin lessons. It was soon discovered by his early instructors that he possessed extraordinary musical talent. He was instructed by various teachera in Copenhagen until he was twelve when he went to Berlin, where he was instructed by Carl Haler, the leading violinist of the royal opera. Later he was instructed by Joseph Joachin, the master violinist. That he was recognized as a man of real talent will be seen from the fact that he has played before the late King Kristian of Denmark, the late King Oscar of Sweden, and also for Hakon, the present King of Norway. This feature is a most important one, as it eliminates in every instance the long delay that is always occasioned in & court action. So far as the expense of conducting arbitration proceedings under the compensation act is concerned, the comparison of costs would be most interesting, the average cost to the state under the compensation act for disputed cases (exclusive of salaries of members of the board) being $13,33 for the 280 cases arbitrated since July 1, 1913. Each arbitrator receives from the state a fee of $5.00 for serving on the committee. In the period mentioned $2,805 has been paid to arbitrators. Them members of the board, acting as chairmen of the various arbitration committees have incurred traveling and hotel expenses of $928.46, making a total cost for the 280 cases of $3,733.46.

"The State Fire Marshall's Bureau has issued a large number of orders directing that fire escapes be added to public buildings or exits changed constructed so as to comply with the law", said State Fire Marshal John T. Winship, "and the most encouraging thing about the whole matter is that the people of the state are complying with these orders at once."

"The Bureau has during the past month received a large number of requests for information regarding fire escapes. The kind of escapes which should be constructed depends a great deal upon the character and location of the buildings, but we suggest that where possible, escapes be built of iron at least three feet in width and at an angle of 45 degrees."

As to the state imigration depart ment which is under control of the domain commission the report of that body says:

"There are 36,370,780 acres of land in Michigan, and nearly one-third, or nearly 9,000,000 acres is still undeveloped, a large part of which is high-ly suitable for farming. This large undeveloped area suggests two questions. The first: why is the unde veloped area so large? and the second: what will be the ultimate gain to the state in the expenditure of effort and money in an attempt to develop these lands? As to the first question let us consider that the best farms in the older settled communities would still be undeveloped had it not been for the fact that the passing of the lumberman and saw mill compelled the people of these communities to turn their attention to agriand is a larger producer of profit culture and the development of their than any other living thing on the lands, and the great northern part of the state, wherein lies the largest amount of undeveloped land, is in practically the same condition today his assertions. Alfalfa was urged as as were the older settled communities a few decates ago. The lumber industry, which held the center of the state in Michigan for many years gradually moved northward and its operations have been so complete that there is now comparatively little timber left for further operations. There is nothing in the sirup line which takes the place of the real maple sirun; but, alas, it is so often adulterated that even the sugar itself cannot be trusted. Our pure food laws are striving valiantly to produce the proper label, and now when we eat corn cobs and molasses we at least treated honestly if we know enough to read the label.

If one has never visited a sugar camp when it is in operation, there is surely a new sensation coming. poor material was Matthew for the making of a saint!

The Sinner The publicans were servants of the tax farmers, who collected dues for Rome, and were extortioners; the custom house official was considered the worst of his class. The Jews had a saying that bears and lions might be the flercest wild beasts in the forest, but publicans and informers were the worst in the cities. For a Jew, such as Matthew was, to enter thus into the service of the oppressors of his own race, was considered the lowest dation. The religion of the day had no hope for such a man,

Some who read these words may have given up hope for acquaintances, and even for those of their own house There may be some, still more unfortunate, who have given up hope for themselves. Let us see what Jesus did for a man who was considered beyoud redemption.

The Saviour.

(1) He called this man to himself. Matthew did not seek him, but he sought Matthew. Christ's words are have chosen you." He calls us by his Holy Spirit, by sick beds, by sor-

He loved me ere I knew Him; He drew me with the cords of love, And thus He bound me to Him."

(2) He proved attractive to this can. The Pharisees acted out their feelings, "I am bolier than thou." But, though sinless, Jesus was the friend of sinners. He won Matthew's heart. and when men know the love of him who was lifted up on the cross for The man who spends all of his time grumbling is a self-confessed failure. If things are always wrong with you it is their sins they are still drawn to him. Raphael's "Transfiguration" is an un sightly daub when seen from certain angles; we must get the right view-point to behold the glories. To a broken and contrite heart, Jesus is altogether lovely.

(3) He was misunderstood. The Pharisees inquired, "why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?" It cost Matthew something to follow Jesus, but it cost Jesus more to reckon him among his disciples. Even if it requires great sacrifice to become a Christian, we should remind ourselves ton everywhere questioned and misunthat Christ's followers often cause him grief and shame; still, he invites us.

The Saint. What were the results of Christ's

(1) He left his business. It may make a similar demand now and some may not be willing to heed it; the Gadarenes preferred their swipe to Jesus (Luke 8:26-37). But Christ promises, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33).

(2) He became an open disciple. By the grace of God, he takes rank above Nicodemus and Joseph, who were dis-ciples "but secretly." The hearts of ciples "but secretly." The hearts of some go out to Christ, but they are not willing to confess him before But the promise is, "If thou shall confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus. God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." (Romans 10:9)

(3) He endeavored to win others. The feast in the house was doubtless for the purpose of acquainting his friends with Jesus. Every follower of Christ has the opportunity of reaching those in his circle of influence. The cultivated Henry Drummond helped students especially, while Hadley led many a drunkard to Jesus, What blessing you will miss, what loss may come to your friends, if you do not follow Christ!

(4) He was lifted out of the commonplace. Matthew seems to have een an ordinary man: he writes as a plain man of business. Yet he was made an evangelist and apostle; and John, in vision, saw his name in the foundations of the new Jerusalem (Rev. 21:14)! The same Saviour made out of Bunyan, the swearing tinker, the author of "Pilgrim's Prog ress," and has wrought many such miracles: He offers to write your same in "The Lamb's book of life!"

Why should you do without him? It is not yet too late; He has not closed the day of grace. He has not shut the gate.

PRESIDENT READS TOLLS MESSAGE FOR THIS WOMAN

URGER CONGRESS TO REPEAL THE EXEMPTION CLAUSE.

"IN VIOLATION OF TREATY"

Favoring of American Coastwise Ves sels Declared by Chief Executive Also to Be Based on Mistaken Economic Policy.

Washington, March 5.-Declaring hat the exemption of American coastwise shipping from the payment of ma canal tolls was based upon a 'mistaken economic policy" and was "in contravention of our treaty with Great Britain," President Wilson today asked congress to repeal the Adson act containing the exemption clause. The appeal was made in per son by the president, who appeared before the senate and house of representatives in joint session.

The president declared that all the world powers were unanimous in judgment that the exemption was in vio-lation of our treaty obligations. Only in the United States, he said, was the emption clause regarded as debatable or as open to question. He said he had not come to congress to deliver a personal view, but that considerstions of justice and wisdom led him to believe that the proviso should be repealed without delay.

The president added that the United States "ought not to quibble" in the matter of a treaty obligation. He intimated that the Panama canal tolls question was involved in all the other foreign questions now before the Uni-ted States, because he would not know how to deal with them unless the ex emption is repealed.

President's Message. The address follows:

"Gentlemen of the Congress:
"I have come to you upon an errand which can be very briefly performed, but I beg that you will not measure its importance by the number of sentences in which I state it. No communication I have addressed to the congress carried with it graver or more far-reaching implications to the interest of the country and I now come to speak upon a matter with regard to which I am charged in a peculiar degree by the constitution itself with personal responsibility. "I have come to ask for the repeal of that provision of the Panama canal act of August 24, 1912, which exempts vessels engaged in the coastwise trade of the United States from payment of tolls, and to urge upon you the justice, the wisdom, and the large policy of such a repeal with the utmost earnestness of which I am capable.

Exemption a Mistake.

"In my own judgment, very fully onsidered and maturely formed, that exemption constitutes a mistaken economic policy from every point of view, and is, moreover, in plain con-travention of the treaty with Great Britain concerning the canal concluded on November 18, 1901. But I have not come to you to urge my personal views. I have come to state to you a fact and a situation.

"Whatever may be our own differ-ences of opinion concerning this muchdebated measure, its meaning is not debated outside the United States. Everywhere else the language of the treaty is given but one interpretation, and that interpretation precludes the exemption I am asking you to repeal.

Consented to Treaty. "We consented to the treaty; its language we accepted, if we did not originate It; and we are too big, too powerful, too self-respecting a nation to interpret with too strained or refined a reading the words of our ow promises just because we have power enough to give us leave to read them as we please. The large thing to do is the only thing we can afford to do, a voluntary withdrawal from a posiaction without raising the question whether we were right or wrong, and so once more deserve our reputation for generosity and the redemption of obligation without quibble or hesitation.

"I ask this of you in support of the foreign policy of the administration. I shall not know how to deal with other meetings of even greater delicacy and nearer consequence if you do not grant it to me in ungrudging

As a reward for good behavior Johnny was allowed to come to the dinner table when company was ex-pected. He wanted to appear big, too, so he chose a low chair which brought his mouth just to the top of the table. But he didn't mind this because it was on a line with his plate and he was not so likely to drop anything while eating. He ate ravenously of every-thing, having nothing to say to the guests, as his mother had told him to remember that good children are seen, not heard. Finally, after dessert, when there was a lull in the conver-

On the morning of the first day of April, 1837, Prince Louis Napoleon d at this window, staring at brown fields and trying to trace and the ancient country which he called his: France, where, since he was seven years old, he had been allowed to spend but a few weeks; France, which had freshly exiled him; France, the thought of which ruled him, as he meant one day to rule her; France, for whom he was eating his heart out today, as always, thousands of miles

He recalled the happy life at Aren enberg, in Switzerland, and the work and play and soldierly training which end-to serve France-a service which did not at that time mean sovereign-ty, for the Duke of Reichstadt, Napoleon's son, was alive and the head house of Bonaparte. He thought of his short career, his and with the Italian insurgents against the Austrians, and the lonely man's heart longed for his own people as he went over again that time of excitement and sorrow, ending with the older boy's death at Forli and his own illess and narrow escape from capture

That young Frenchman-if he should be alive—if ever he should meet him egula Prince Louis would not forget. it was psychological that he should have been thinking this when a knock sounded deferentially on the door of the room. But picturesque coincidences happen in lives as well as on the stage; in Louis Napoleon's there was more than one, "Entres!" he called sharply, and then, "Come in!"

And the slient prince understood.

CHAPTER XXV.

How Lucy Told. The prince was gone. There had been festivities and formalities, great dinners, gatherings of the Virginia nobility to do honor to his highness at Roanoke house and elsewhere; everywhere the Chevalier Beaupre had been listinguished by his highness' most marked favor. And Lucy Hampton's eyes had shone with quiet delight tosee it and to see the effect on her fa-For the colonel, confused in his mind as to how it might he true reluctantly acknowledged that there must be something of importance about this Chevalier Beaupre, that prince should treat him as a brother He believed that it would be best to treat him-he also-at least as a gentleman. So the French lessons were continued and the Jefferson troop was encouraged, and Francols was asked often to Roanoke house. And as the months rolled on he tried with every thoughtful and considerate effort to express to the little lady of the manor als gratitude for the goodness of her family. It troubled him more than little that the early friendliness and intimacy of Harry Hampton seemed to be wearing off. It was two minutes, perhaps, before Caperton Bayly, with a negro boy at his heels, with Jack Littleton and Harry Wise and a dozen other lads racing back of him, had plunged over the drop of land where Francois had disappeared. Two minutes are enough sometimes for a large event. In that two minutes Lucy Hampton, without conscious volition by an instinct as simple and imperative as a bird's instinct to shield her young, had alipped from her horse Bluebird and flown across the level and down over th steep bank till she found herself holding Francois' dark head in her arms and heard her own voice saying words she had never said even to herself.

"I love you, I love you," she said, and if all the world heard she did not know or care. There was no world for her at that minute but the mat lying with his head against her heart dend it might be but dead or alive dearest. "I love you—love you—love you," she repeated, as if the soul were rushing out of her in the words.

With that the luminous great eyes opened, and Francois was looking at ner, and she knew that he had heard. And then the training of a lifetime, of centuries, flooded back into her, and womanly reticence and maidenly shame and the feelings and attitude which are not primeval, as she had been primeyal for that one mad me trying to lift himself, and left him free and was on her feet, and then with a shock she was aware of another presence: turning she looked up into the And Lucy smiled and believed angry glow of her cousin's eyes. was not looking at her, but at the man who, dazed, hurt, was trying painfully to pull himself up. ### LEVER AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION BILL AND WHAT IT IS SUPPOSED TO DO

This Act, Which Provides for Carrying to the Actual Farmer Upon the Farm the Latest and Best Methods of Agriculture, Passed Congress by an Almost Unanimous Vote-Senate Increased Appropriation Passed by House.

By HOWARD H. GROSS,

Washington.-A review of the efforts that have been made for better agriculture, why, this last act was passed and what it is supposed to do, will be interesting.

were designed to disseminate the agri-cultural knowledge to the farmers of the country, upon the theory that agri-culture is the most important industry and that the success of all our efforts for advancing civilization is based upon it. It soon became apparent that the body of definite scientific knowldge was very limited, so 25 years later, under the Hatch act, congress established the United States experiment stations for the purpose of developing an effective system of agri-This was followed by the Adams act providing for scientific research; then the Nelson amendments were passed increasing the appropriadepartment of agriculture have been at work developing, collecting, classifying and reducing to practice a vast fund of thoroughly tested out, scientific knowledge relating to agriculture, which, if it were in the hands of the actual farmers and generally applied by them, would revolutionize the art of farming and bring untold benefit to the whole people and to the farmers in particular. The re-direction of agriculture on scientific lines is one of the biggest and most important subjects that has ever been brought before the

For the last 15 years or more various efforts have been made to get this stored up knowledge out into the hands of the actual farmers for whom it was gathered, and who helped to nav the enormous cost of getting it. They undoubtedly have the right not only to ask but demand that it should be furnished to them in such a manner that they can make use of it.

Among the plans tried was the send ing broadcast to the farmers and others interested ten of millions of bulletins from the department at Washington and many more from the experi ment stations and colleges. tively few of these bulleting, however were written in plain non-technical language, hence the average person could not understand them.

"talk-fests" at farmers' meetings, also the operation of lecture trains in co-operation with the railways.

None or all of these methods how ever, have proven sufficient for the purpose, in fact they have hardly made a dent upon the main proposi-tion. Experience showed that a better way must be found. Well, one was found years ago, and that was in king actual field demonstrations, show ing the improved results that were secured by newer methods. This was convincing and just what was needed. It was not only theory, but theory ap plied in practice.

Few people not engaged in the in-dustry realize that farming is a very difficult husiness owing to the ever changing conditions that the farmer must meet. One season it is too wet, the next too dry, the third is too wet, say, in the spring and too dry later in the year when the crop is matured; one year it is too cold, then the next one year it is too coin, then the text it is not winds; pests innumerable are to be contended with always, both above and below ground; weeds are everywhere in evidence. There are few lines of business that are more complex or where there is greater need for sound judgment, experience quick decision, prompt action and that opens a larger field for the application are too apt to think science a mysterious and intangible something, when indeed it is very simple; when reduced to its last analysis it is the

If we observe and interpret cor-rectly conditions and then do the right thing at the right time and in the ill be interesting.

Over fifty years ago by the Morrill dant. The steel industry was comact, congress established the agricultural colleges by land grant. They the same time immensely increased. Agriculture will as surely be revolutionized by science within a score of years. We have on hand, and we might cay in cold storage, the scientific knowledge necessary to do this. The problem is to get it out to the man on the farm and have him make use of it.

> The Lever agricultural extension act, just passed by congress, will furnish a practical, sensible, efficient and sufficient plan for doing this. By its terms, by co-operation with the states. it endows the agricultural colleges with sufficient funds to enable the colleges to train and place ultimately and permanently in every agricultural county a trained man to help the farm ers understand and apply the new methods in farm operations, and keep these methods up to date.

If the plan is to succeed, it is of the lighest importance that the farmer shall do his part and co-operate with the farm adviser fully and in a friendly way. The danger that surrounds the plan is the sending out of incapa ble or indiscreet men as farm advisers it will be a difficult position for a mar to hold; he should be well versed in all phases of farming and have both a thorough, scientific training and con practical farm experience He must know how to meet people in an acceptable manner. It will be the duty of these advisers to assist such farmers as desire it, to understand and apply the newer methods in their farm operations. These men will be the medium by which the college will reach the farmer and the farmer wil reach the college-a sort of pipe line through which the pent-up knowledge will reach the farms. The attitude of these farm advisers is designed to be that of a co-operator rather than an instructor, for it will doubtless be true that they will learn as much from the farmers as the farmers will learn from them. The one is presumed to be equipped with the theory and the science of the art, and the other the practical experience of it. The best results should be had by bringing these together. The Lever act contem sumed to work out and what those vho framed it had in mind.

Suppose we take a state of 100 counties. The state college authorities the first year can find only a few men in whole state, say, ten, who are capable of doing field work as adviser, so they must make a start with these. The next year a few more can be found and trained and fitted for the work, it will probably be eight or ten years be-fore the state will be fully equipped and every county supplied with an efficient man, and the plan contemplated by the act be fully organized and in operation. The counties will undoubtedly be clamoring for men long before they can get them, so the danger lies in going too fast and letting incompe tent men slip into the service. No greater mistake could be made. The ten available men to begin with should be located at central points where they will be most accessible as farm advisers. They should have two or three assistants, young men taking the agri-cultural college course, and use them to do the preliminary work under the direction and supervision of the district farm adviser. They will visit the farmers, tell them of the plan and ascertain from them whatever serious problems they may have relating to that locality and how they have been dealing with them. These young men should consult frequently, if not daily,

They were grim years, those three years during which Mary Turner serv "And so you claim that you were ed her sentence in Burnsing. There forced to steal. But, all nights in a dreariness of suffering that was the material iil ever present in the round of wearisome physical toll-the course, distasteful food; the hard narsomeness of imprisonment, away from light and air, away from all that makes life worth while.

The best evidence of the fact that Mary Turner's soul was not fainly soiled must be found in the fact that atill at the expiration of her sentence she was fully resolved to live straight as the saying is which she had quoted sare knowledge as to the difficulties that would beset the effort and in the face of the temptations offered to fol-

She had been reared in a criminal family, which must excess much. Long ago she had lost track of her father. Her mother she had never father. Her mother she had never known. Her one relation was a brother of high standing as a pickpocket.

One principal reason of her success in leading on men to make fools of themselves over her, to their everlasting regret afterward, lay in the fact that in spite of all the gross irregularities of her life she remained chaste.

The girl saw in Mary Turner the possibilities of a ladylike personality that might mean much financial profit in the decious ways of which she was a mistress. With the frankness char-acteristic of her, she proceeded to paint glowing pictures of a future shared to the undoing of ardent and fatuous swains. Mary Turner listened with curiosity, but she was in no wise moved to follow such a life, even though it did not necessitate anything worse than a fraudulent playing at love. So, she steadfastly continued ber refusals. She would live straight. "You will find that you are

Mary found the prophecy true. Back in New York she experienced a poverty more ravaging than any she had known in those five lean years of her working in the store. They even called in the asdstance of Edward Gilder himself, who obligingly wrote a very severe letter to the girl's employer. In the end, though unwillingly enough, he dismiss ed Mary from his service.

It was then that despair did come upon the girl. She had tried with all the strength of her to live straight. Yet, despite her innocence, the world would not let her live according to her own conscience. It demanded that she be the criminal it had branded her-if were to live at all. She still walked the streets falteringly, seeking some place, but her heart was gone from the quest. Came an hour when she thought of the river and was glad.

So she went through the long stretch of Ill lighted streets crossed some rollroad tracks to a pier, over which she hurrled to the for end, where it pro-Hadson. There, without giving herself a moment's pause for reaction or hesitation, she leaped out as far as her strength permitted into the coil of waters. His rather low voice was soothing to her tired soul, and bis whole air was at one masterful and gently tender. When thally she was able to stand and to walk with the support of his arm she went forward slowly at his side without so much even as a question of whither.

Joe Garson had performed, perhaps, his first action with no thought of self at the back of it. He had risked his life to save that of a stranger. The sensation was at once novel and thrilling. Since it was so agreeable he meant to prolong the glow of self satisfaction by continuing to care for this waif of the river.

Joe Garson, the notorlous forger, led the dripping girl eastward through the squalld streets until at last they came to an adequately lighted avenue, and there a taxical was found. It carried them further north, and to the east to an apartment house that was rather imposing, set in a street of humbler

WE HAVE FAITH IN THIS STOMACH REMEDY

A woman customer said to us the other

A woman customer said to us the other day, "Say, you ought to tell everyone in town about Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets. I would myself if I could?" That set us to thinking. So many people have used them and have so enthusiastically sounded their praises both to us and their friends, that we had an idea you all knew about them. But, in the chance that some of you who suffer from indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia, or some other stomach complaint, don't know about them—we are writing this.

They contain Bismuth and Pepain, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science. They coothe and comfort the stomach, promote the sceration of gastrie juice, help to quickly digest the food and convert it into rich, red blood, and improve the action of the bowels. We believe them to be the best remedy made for indigestion and dyspepsia. We certainly wouldn't offer them to you entirely at our risk unless we felt sure they would do you a lot of good. If Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets do not relieve your indigestion, check the heartburn, and make it possible for you to eat what you like whenever you like, come back and get your money.

Sold only at the more than 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only at our store. Three sizes, 25c, 50c, and $1.00. Present: Hon. Wellington Batterson
